

DESCRIPTION, RULES, & DEFINITIONS

ShootPoker: is an online card game. It can incorporate anything from two players up to six player which includes one player whom is designated as the dealer. To select the first dealer the pack of cards is split between the players and the highest card win the right to become the first dealer.

The Cards: A standard deck consists of 52 unique cards. Each card has a "rank" and a "suit". There are 4 different suits, hearts and Diamonds are red whilst the Spades and Clubs are black, Each have 13 different ranks. In the game of 'Shoot' the ace card is deemed low, leaving the King(s) as the highest card(s).

The Dealer: places a card individually in front of each player, starting with the first player to their right, and deliverers a single card to the remaining players. Until they pass themselves without delivering a card, and then delivers a second card to each of the players, again clockwise, each face down. Finally the dealer distributes the third and final card to each of the players, therefore each player will have Three playing cards directly in front of them, and face down. The dealer having completed his task deals the last card from the top of the remaining pack in front of himself. If the dealer turns the card over without submitting a stake then the minimum permitted bet is used. However should the dealer choose to nominate a stake which is greater than minimum but less or equal to the pre-determined maximum stake, this should be made prior to them turning over the card that they have in front of them.

The House: The pre-determined maximum and minimum stakes of each individual table is determined by the house. 'The House' is the corporate entity who has the legal right to provide the facilities for the game to take place. It is the duty of the house to clearly advise each potential player, the stakes that is required, the rules of the game, a declaration of intention including all the risks involved, and a cashiers desk.

The Cashier: will handle all financial transactions, such as exchanging casino chips and tickets for cash, processing credit card advances, and managing customer accounts for deposits and withdrawals. They are responsible for accurately processing these exchanges, maintaining a high level of integrity, ensuring compliance with regulations, and providing excellent customer service.

No Fees: Each house determines the currency in which they wish to trade. It can be anticipated that the currency chosen will be the that of the country of residence. The table on which the game is played requires that the players purchase 'Chips or Tokens' from the cashier. This transaction is completely free and the rate of each can be obtained on any major bank or Forex, or exchange bureau. However the cashier can charge a figure equal to or below a 10% for each transaction when they wish to change the tokens back to their chosen currency. The tokens must be reverted back at the end of each session and the currency can be placed into their online account.

Shoot and ShootPoker: are deemed as intellectual property, they are the creation of Trevor H. Whitehouse who-is a UK citizen and Spanish resident, it is I, (the author) who designed the game, the rules, players obligation including the house rules. The software that runs the game is credited to Dylan Ball from the UK who in consultation with Mr. Whitehouse provided the dealer interactions with the player and the house rules. Whilst the Location Design, Cards, Avatars and Tables, in consultation with Messrs Whitehouse and ball are designed and created by Dinesh Lallmaun who resides in Mauritius

Trade Mark: A trademark is a word, phrase, symbol, or design that legally identifies and distinguishes the goods or services of one company from another. It acts as a brand for a product or company, providing legal protection and helping consumers recognise the source of a product or service. Trademarks can be registered to provide enhanced protection, but they can also exist through common use and are often represented by symbols like ©, ® or ™ Trademarks can be words, logos, slogans, package designs, or even sounds, smells, or colours.

Place your Bets: "Place your bets" is an idiom that means to make a wager on the outcome of an event, such as a race, game, or competition. It is a command to put money or something of value at risk based on a prediction of what will happen. The phrase indicates that a person is making a bet or a guess and is willing to risk losing something if their prediction is wrong.

Cards: Playing cards are small, rectangular pieces of card stock or plastic used to play a wide variety of games. Each card is marked on one side with a suit and rank, such as a number or face, while the other side has a uniform design or is blank. They can also be used for entertainment, education, and conjuring. One side, the "face," is marked with identifying symbols and numbers that distinguish it from other cards. The reverse side, or back, has a design that is identical on every card in the deck.

Cashier: means the person who issues 'Chips' and makes payments to clients and is responsible for a casino computer program, data, and any related accounting duties

Dealer: The person who distributes or deals the cards to the players in a card game. They are the declarer of procedure and the highest bidder, House: The 'House' means the casino administration. You can find the phrase "the house always wins", for example. As I understand it is about the fact that the casino eventually receives more money than its players and always has a profit.

Player: "The Players" in a casino refers to the patrons or customers who are gambling. They are also commonly called gamblers, betters, or punters. Casinos often categorise these individuals based on their betting habits and the amount of money they wager

Pot: The pot in poker refers to the sum of money that players wager during a single hand or game, according to the betting rules of the variant being played. It is likely that the word pot is related to or derived from the word jackpot.

Table: Our tables typically have a smooth playing surface, often covered with felt or speed cloth, featuring our trademarks and logo's but also specific markings and layouts that indicate betting areas, card placement, and game rules. They may also include a padded "Rail" for players to rest their arms and cup holders.
